CENTRAL / FEDERAL

Federation just means letting people on different social networks follow each other.

W3C SOCIAL WG

W3C launches push for social web application interoperability.

- 50 participants from W3C, Apache, Mozilla, Universities, Institutes, Business (Boing, IBM, Telcos...)

People and the content they create are the core components of the social web; they make up the social graph. This document describes a standard way in which people can:

- connect with other people and subscribe to their content;
- create, update and delete social content;
- interact with other peoples' content;
- be notified when other people interact with their content;

regardless of what that content is or where it is stored.
